News Briefs

There are times when a hospital's life-sustaining equipment keeping a severely defective newborn baby alive should be shut off and the baby be allowed to die, according to Albert R. Jonsen and Michael J. Garland, co-editors of a new book, Ethics of Newborn Intensive Care, and bioethics teachers in the Health Policy Program.

This issue, created by rapidly advancing technology, is confronted in essays by 12 authorities in medicine, economics, social welfare, psychology, law, philosophy, and theology.

The writers point out that the doctor has two clients, the infant and the parents. Parental decisions normally control the relationship, since the baby cannot be a consenting partner. But the physician, responding directly to the moral value of his infant-patient, may at times be duty-bound to resist a parental decision, according to the report.

The writers favor a conservative approach to such decisions, however, with a bias toward survival rather than death - especially since it is difficult to forecast the ability of an endangered infant to participate in human experience.

Two UCSF opthalmologists are now participating in a nationwide study of vitrectomy, a major new eye operation for preventing and treating blindness due to diabetes. The National Eye Institute has awarded a contract to Alexander Irvine, Associate Professor and Chairman of Retinal Service and Robert D. Stone, Assistant Professor, making UCSF one of 13 centers taking part in a controlled clinical trial of this operation, the Diabetic Retinopathy Vitrectomy Study (DRVS).

Vitrectomy involves the surgical removal of blood-filled vitreous and scar tissue from the eye which has formed as the result of diabetes. The primary goal of the study is to determine the optimal time after hemorrhage for performing vitrectomy. It will compare the risks and potential benefits of performing vitrectomy soon after hemorrhage occurs with those of waiting a year for the hemorrhage to clear on its own before operating, as is now usual practice.

A new medical treatment for gallstones may offer an alternative to surgery for some patients says David L. Earnest, Director of the SFGH Gallstone Treatment Center. Patients are currently being sought to participate in this study, sponsored by the National Institutes of Health.

According to Dr. Earnest, Assistant Professor of Medicine, current testing in ten medical centers nationwide is designed to further demonstrate the effectiveness and apparent safety of chenodeoxycholate, the compound being evaluated, and to determine more precisely the best dosage level.

Physicians and patients who would like further information about the program should contact the Gallstone Treatment Center by calling 666-3026 or by writing the National Cooperative Gallstone Treatment Center, Bldg. 100, Rm. 339, SFGH Medical Center.

Margretta Styles assumes her new post this week as Dean of the School of Nursing. Dr. Styles, former Dean of Wayne State University College of Nursing, is a nursing consultant to the Surgeon General, USAF and HEW's U.S. Public Health Service, Division of Nursing.

John J. Deller, Jr. has been appointed to head the Internal Medicine track of the Primary Care Residency Program. Dr. Deller was Chief of the Department of Medicine at Letterman Army Medical Center in addition to serving on the UCSF clinical faculty in the Division of Ambulatory and Community Medicine. He has also been appointed associate clinical professor of medicine in the Division.

The Primary Care Residency Program provides broad medical training which focuses on health needs of the patient and family. Primary care residents are trained to handle the ongoing management of a patient and act as coordinator when the patient needs to consult a specialist.

Dr. Deller is conducting clinical research in job retirement and is also studying the incidence of breast and uterine cancer in women who have taken estrogen after menopause.

James E. Cleaver, Professor of Radiology received the 1976 Lila Gruber Cancer Award at the annual meeting of the American Academy of Dermatology, early in December. The Award was for his studies on the biochemistry of a rare hereditary disease, xeroderma pigmentosum, which predisposes individuals to sun-induced skin cancer. Dr. Cleaver's research indicates that skin cells of persons with this disease either lack, or are defective in, enzymes that are needed to repair genetic damage caused by normal exposure to sunlight. According to Dr. Cleaver, the failure of DNA repair could lead to the development of skin cancer either because the sun-damaged DNA produces mutant DNA molecules, or because the damaged DNA is more susceptible to a cancer causing virus in the environment.

SFGH Briefs

A bronze plaque has been placed naming the new lobby gift shop at SFGH Medical Center the Olga Clifton Gift Shop, in honor of the hospital's director of volunteers who retired December 31. Mrs. Clifton served in this position since the volunteer service began in 1957. Succeeding her is Phyllis Cardozo, formerly a staff member of the Ramsey Day Activity Center, Ramsey County Mental Health Center, St. Paul, Minn.

John Mills, Assistant Prof/Medicine and Microbiology, has been appointed Chief, Division of Infectious Diseases, SFGH. He has also been named director of the new Viral Diagnostic Laboratory at SFGH, first of its kind conducted by UCSF. Dr. Mills served from 1973-76 as Chief of the SFGH Emergency Medicine Unit and Walk-In Service.

The appointment of Donald Tusel as Acting Chief of the Psychiatric Service at SFGH has been announced. Dr. Tusel assumed his duties at SFGH December 20. For the past three years, he has been Director of Training for the Crisis Service (Westside Community Mental Health Service) at Mount Zion. Before that, he was a clinical instructor of psychiatry at the University of Colorado School of Medicine. Dr. Tusel is a graduate of Harvard University, received his M.D. at the University of Chicago School of Medicine, completed his internship at Walter Reed Hospital, and his residency at the University of Colorado.

Deadline for the next issue of Today/Tomorrow which will cover the events from Jan. 15-28 will be Tuesday, Jan. 4, 11 a.m. Please send your copy to Allen Balderson, News Services Department, 1475 4th Ave.
